THE DALL.

Given in Honor of the Infants in New York.

The Hall Transformed into a House of Green and Light.

New York, May 27.—The hall under the auspices of the Children's Colonization Society was one of the most beautiful ever given in New York. The decorations were all on the most lavish scale from the twenty-five entrances of the assembly room to the hall room and reception room.

The hall began at the early hour of 10 o'clock. The infants and the ladies of her state had placed at their disposal the private carriage of Mrs. E. J. Loring and Mrs. T. S. Loring. These ladies, in which they were seated to the hall, Mrs. E. Smith and Mrs. C. L. Smith, of the Children's Colonization Society, went to the hotel and escorted the royal party to the hall.

The ladies' court of mounted police, tendered through the courtesy of Superintendent Dwyer. The entrance hall was transformed into a house of green and light with bunches of apples and peach blossoms. The hall was decorated with a lower of red and pink roses and most exquisite flowers.

The room in which the infants received was most gorgeous. This room was the upper concert hall and was decorated by Dwyer with red and Spanish flags and with bunches of red and white flowers.

The reception was as informal as any in any well-appointed New York house. The infants then went to her box at the south side of the assembly room, where this box was placed a lower of red and pink roses and most exquisite flowers.

The music for dancing was furnished by Lander's orchestra, and that for the grand march by a band led by George Lander.

The princess entered the royal box with Prince Antonio. She was seated in a beautiful gown of very blue, with extra long court train. The hem was garnished with miniature drawings of the children, and the princess wore a crown of red and white flowers.

The princess held a reception after which she descended to the floor on the arm of some nobleman. A lady in a blue dress followed, which concluded the great event.

Armored Men Camped in Mahlenberg County.

The Citizens Object to Paying Interest on the Mahlenberg Bonds.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., May 27.—I. S. Marshall, Blackhawk, with every available regular deputy and sixty special constables, arrived in Mahlenberg county, Ky., on Friday, and camped in Mahlenberg county. He will, in accordance with the order of the federal court, levy on the property of the citizens of Mahlenberg county for the purpose of collecting the defaulted interest on the bonds voted by the county in the construction of the Elizabethtown and Paducah railroad, which is now a part of the Newport News and Mississippi Valley system.

With the greatest possible secrecy, Marshall, with Deputy Marshal Bedford, left Thursday night, Deputy Marshal Smith left Bowling Green at the same time, with a party of thirty men, and Deputy Marshal Bell, with twenty-five men from Harrodsburg, arrived at Central City, Ky., on Friday morning. They were accompanied by a number of federal soldiers, and the citizens of Mahlenberg county were notified of their arrival.

The citizens of Mahlenberg county, who are opposed to the payment of the interest on the bonds, have organized a committee to resist the levy. They have also organized a militia, and are prepared to defend themselves against the federal forces.

The federal forces, however, are determined to collect the interest on the bonds, and they have already levied on the property of the citizens of Mahlenberg county. They have also seized the property of the citizens of Mahlenberg county, and are holding it for the federal government.

The citizens of Mahlenberg county are now in a state of great excitement, and they are determined to resist the federal forces. They have also organized a militia, and are prepared to defend themselves against the federal forces.

UGLY CHARGES.

Made Against the Managers of the Indiana Prison System.

LOUISVILLE, May 27.—Ugly charges against the management of the Indiana state prison, south, in Jeffersonville, were investigated Friday by acting Governor Ketchum. Hardly had the officials recovered from the tedious legislative session than the rumor goes out that the sudden death of convict Newton Short on Wednesday was due to negligence and possibly brutality. Warden Patton ordered an autopsy on the remains. Captain V. J. Colby, who has asserted that the prisoner's life had been shortened by reason of the treatment received while in confinement, was first placed on the stand. He said: "I demanded an inquiry and stayed in the warden's office until he agreed to an autopsy. He would never have ordered one had I not insisted. Dr. Bunker, the prison physician, told me last Friday there was nothing the matter with Short, except that he had an epileptic seizure and was in a coma. He said: 'Let him die; he's just playing off.' Short was angry, and they failed to give him medicine. I have been cognizant of these facts for a month. Deputy Warden Howard and Dr. Bunker told me that they had a change in the administration."

Dr. T. A. Graham, who with Dr. D. Depton conducted the autopsy, was next called. He stated that Short's death was produced by apoplexy, and that he had been in a coma for several days. A blood clot had been found at the base of the brain. There were complications such as pleurisy and adhesion and fatty degeneration of the heart. He said that he had been in the prison for several months, and that he had been in a coma for several days. A blood clot had been found at the base of the brain. There were complications such as pleurisy and adhesion and fatty degeneration of the heart.

The president has committed to imprisonment for life the death sentence of Edward Pickens, a fellow inmate of the Indiana state prison, who was charged with the murder of a man in the district of Columbia. The ground for commutation is that Pickens is a very low order of intelligence, whose surroundings have not been favorable to the development of his mind. The court officers all recommended clemency.

As the result of District Attorney Mitchell's consultation with Attorney General McKim, it was decided that Pickens should be kept in the prison for life. The court officers all recommended clemency.

CONTROLLER ECKELS.

Will Call the Attention of the Next Congress to

A Measure Limiting the Loan of Money of National Banks to their Officers.

WASHINGTON, May 26.—Controller Eckels will recommend to the next congress a measure limiting the loan of money of the national banks to their officers and directors, the president of the bank, its cashier and those who hold enough stock in it to be members of the board of governance. The proposed measure will require a yes and nay vote by the national legislature when such loans are made.

It is the intention of the controller to demand close examination of the books of banks wherein the president or cashier or any of those who hold enough stock in it to be a member of the board of governance, borrow the bank's money. Mr. Eckels believes that the failure of the Columbia national bank of Indianapolis and the First National bank of Cedar Falls, Ia., was due to this indiscriminate borrowing of their own money by officials of the banks.

ON TO RICHMOND.

Ceremonies Over the Removal of Jefferson Davis' Remains.

NEW ORLEANS, La., May 25.—The remains of Jeff Davis, the president of the confederacy, were removed from Louisiana on Friday, en route to their final resting place at Richmond, Va. The memorial hall in which the body lay in state, was visited all Saturday night and Sunday by a crowd of citizens representing all ranks from the humble laborer to the haughty aristocrat, all vying with each other in their attempt to, in some measure, show their respect for the deceased whose remains were about to be transferred from the state which he loved so well, and in which his last moments were spent. The funeral offerings were very handsome. There were mammoth stars and crescents of laurels in the confederate colors, and came respectively from the veterans, Confederate states' cavalry, Louisiana division, from the Army of the Tennessee and from the Ladies' Confederate Memorial association. The Washington Artillery Veterans were represented in a band of immortal in a yellow circle trimmed with blue with crossed cannons in the center and the name of the command framed in purple across the face of the design. The gift of the Confederate Veterans' Association of Augusta was a wreath of white immortelles with "C. S. A. Augusta" in red immortelles above and below the circle. As the hour drew near for the last adieu, the crowd of people, the crowd at the hall increased and every available inch of the banquet place, for blocks distant was held by persons anxious to catch a glimpse of the mortal procession which was soon to pass.

Gov. Murphy J. Foster and Lieut. Gov. Partridge, accompanied by their staff, reached the hall at 2:30. They were followed by Rev. Gordon Baker, a confederate veteran, and a moral sense and there was some provocation. The court officers all recommended clemency.

As the result of District Attorney Mitchell's consultation with Attorney General McKim, it was decided that Pickens should be kept in the prison for life. The court officers all recommended clemency.

FRIDAY, JUNE 2, 1893.

It is estimated that by the $250 exemption close the taxable property of Kentucky is reduced $5,000,000.

Gov. Foster, having just failed in his own business on account, as he confesses, of neglect and bad management, is hardly the financier to tell the Government what policy it should pursue.

Ex-Secretary Foster has failed, with liabilities of possibly a million and assets very much less. Too much politics and not enough attention to personal affairs are the causes given by the Secretary himself.

Representative George Halbert, according to mighty good authority, charged the legislature with all sorts of venality and corruption, and now he says he didn't do it. We are afraid the venerable Geo. is in a fix.

The Public Ledger, of Maysville, has been scoring the county magistrates for illiberality and general assuinity. The C. M.'s made a few weak attempts at refutation but Davis, as usual, comes out right side up. We used to have a time with our twenty-four or more justices, but happily we have attained unto better things.

The General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church is trying Dr. Briggs for heresy. Old John Calvin tried Servetus for "heresy" and then burnt him at the stake, or burnt him first and tried him afterwards, we have forgotten which, and from the temper and malice displayed by the present board of inquisitors we feel sure some of them would be only too happy to give Briggs a roasting.

The Union Literary Society of the State College Lexington, Ky., held its regular meeting last Tuesday night at the college, and President Patterson, in order to prevent the usual disorder, applied to the police for assistance. The officers were dressed in citizens' clothes, and their presence did not become generally known until about the time the entertainment was drawing to a close. The students had prepared two cannon, to be fired at the closing of the exercises, and after discovering that they were being watched, began "guying" the officers. They moved toward the guns, and avowed their intention to fire the salute. The officers drew their pistols, and threatened to kill the first one to touch the cannon. A large mountaineer student grabbed a coupling pin from the gun, and declared that he had fifty backers, and they would fire the gun or die. While this discussion was going on, one of the boys got hold of the string which they had arranged to touch off the guns, and they both exploded at once, knocking the officers down and completely deafening them.

After chasing the policemen to town, the students invaded the President's front yard, and kept up a howl until well-nigh daylight. The faculty called a number of them up in the morning, but there being so many and it being impossible to find the leader, they were not punished. Nearly one-half of the faculty voted for dismissing the ring leaders.

A citizen of Frunchburg, Menifee county, is afraid the new charter for towns of the sixth class is a mischief as far as that place is concerned. The Ground-Swell

Owensboro Inquirer: If the House will get that early adjournment resolution through, all past delinquencies will be forgiven it by a very tolerant constituency.

Greenville Muhlenberger: Legislators, in Kentucky are paid five dollars a day for their services. About two-thirds of the present Legislature should be indicted for obtaining money under false pretenses.

Owensboro Messenger: There are signs that real trouble is now in store for the Legislature if it does not immediately show in good faith evidence of quitting. The Senate has agreed to adjourn June 15. What says the House?

Elizabethtown News: The Legislature is very anxious for the scalp of Representative Halbert because he abused it, but it does not compare with the longings of the people for the scalps of that whole body of triflers, who have squandered their time, pillaged the treasury and exhausted their patience.

Maysville Public Ledger: The Kentucky Legislature is careful to keep up its record for taking care of its own members and letting the taxpayers supply the necessary funds. A resolution to fine absentees was introduced in the House, but the Senate voted down the bill to deduct the per diem of members absent without good cause.

The Legislature gets worse and worse every day. It ought to turn off the gas and go home," says the Paducah News.

It ought to blow it out and go to bed.

Of Mr. Spalding's anti-dog bill the Larue County Herald says the trouble is that the members of the Legislature "care very little about dogs and less about sheep. Their favorite occupation is attending the Lexington races."

Who Is To Blame?

We listen to the talk of Republicans as to the responsibility for the present financial stringency with feelings of mingled amusement and disgust. The vapors of the opposition press are equally as idle and silly. The entire refrain of their doleful song is, A Democratic administration is responsible for the whole of it. Bless their dear innocent hearts, do they ever think of McKinley and his little bill?

Of Foster and his monkeying with Wall Street? Do they forget the tremendous panic in Europe, the failure of so many of the great money concerns there, and the consequent withdrawal of multiplied millions of capital from America? The fallacy of McKinley and the foolish pandering of Foster to Wall Street gave a fictitious value to stocks. The people repudiated the iniquitous and unreasonable doctrine of McKinley.

Foster and his foolishness went down and out with an administration which gave support to all that was unreal and unwise, and the result could not be otherwise than temporarily disastrous. We say temporarily, because we believe the wise firmness of Mr. Carlisle in refusing to yield to the clamoring of Wall Street for bonds will restore confidence and build up trade. After all, legitimate business has suffered but little. Trusts have hoisted, speculators on the necessities of the people have been knocked down and trampled on, but none keep safe themselves. God lives and Democracy and the people are all right.

Louisville Times:—Not the least interesting feature of the World's Fair opening, as exemplifying individual opportunity and personal possibility in this great country, is this: The man who pressed the button that caused a square mile of inanimate matter, gathered at a cost of $100,000,000, to leap into life in the presence of 200,000 animated beings, was but a few years ago the sheriff of a single county in the State of New York, at which time the railroad magnate in whose private car the now President of the United States left for the seat of government after electrifying the fair was section foreman on the little Shelby branch railroad in the suburbs of Louisville. This is a feature of the first day of the Fair of which the Times make a note, with the hope that every boy who reads these lines may do likewise.

To the American boy of even the humblest station in life everything is possible.

There is talk of an excursion train from Ashland next Sunday to accommodate those who wish to attend the wonderful religious meeting now going on in Louisville.

We have a picture of Editor Conley going along the Midway Plaisance, with a Chicago girl swinging to each arm. We know them for Chicago girls by the size of their feet.

The editor has gone to the World's Exposition, leaving the News in the hands of his friends. Here's hoping that he may not have occasion to say on his return, "Save me from my friends!"

The work of moving and remodeling the parsonage of the South Methodist Church has begun. Mr. George Castle is superintending the work, and the minister's family has moved into a house belonging to H. T. Burns.

Elder Gooding preached at the South Methodist Church last Sunday morning, the congregation of the upper church attending. In the evening there were union services at the M. E. Church, conducted by Miss Cartwright.

Fred Bradley, who lives about four miles from Louisville on the Little Italy road, was seriously hurt yesterday morning. He was kicked in the face by a horse with such force that five teeth were knocked out and a long deep gash cut in his lip.

Monday's Courier Journal has a cut showing the arrival of the Kentucky editors in Louisville. One Knight of the pencil carries a satchel and a seven benign smile like Editor Conley's, but the accompanying mustache is not recognized by those who know him best.

The Louisville Roller Mill has been sold to a syndicate of well-known business men of this place, who will enlarge and otherwise improve the plant and run it to its full capacity. Mr. Leonard, who is also one of the stock holders, will direct the operating of the mill.

Decoration Day was very quietly observed by our people. The bank was closed, but as the law requires the post office to be kept open for the arrival and departure of the mails it was not north while to close it at all. Many went to our beautiful cemetery and spent the day among the graves of their beloved dead. Fragrant offerings, most with tears for those who loved and lost, were tenderly laid about the precious dust, as faithful memory recalled each vanished form and face.

MISS ANNA CARTWRIGHT.

The Evangelist.

Louisa is being profoundly stirred. Not Louisa only but the region round about. Cassville comes over on masses, and from the north, the south and the west they come by day and by night. Every afternoon the commodious audience room of the M. E. Church is nearly filled, and at night it is packed to the doors, with multitudes in the yard and on the pavement. What is the magnet which brings out all these people, rich or poor, and holds them until after ten o'clock each night? Primarily, curiosity to see and hear a woman preacher; secondly, a deep and abiding interest in a revival of religion, and, on the part of scores, a desire to flee the wrath to come and be saved from their sins. "They came to scoff and remained to pray."

Let us go in, if we can get in. Every seat is full, and the aisles are full of occupied chairs. We find a seat by dint of much pushing and crowding, and after taking breath we turn our eyes up to the speaker and try to pick out the "woman-preacher" of our preconceived idea. As we conclude that she has not yet arrived an entirely womanly woman arises and says in a rich contralto voice, "Let us sing hymn number two." There must be some mistake. Where are the hand features, the angular figure, the short hair, the harsh, high-pitched voice of the typical strong-minded woman? None of these characteristics are here. In their stead we see a woman, whose face, if we don't say lady, we never liked the word, we see a woman of medium height, young in years, of graceful figure, pleasing and expressive face lighted up by a pair of honest, kindly eyes, and every feature indicative of great earnestness and sincerity of purpose. Her manner is very winning, in the pulpit and out of it, and we fancy that this, coupled with her earnestly sincere purpose, is the secret of her success.

The hymn being sung Miss Cartwright asks the congregation to kneel with her and ask the Divine blessing. The petition is a simple one. It is the request of a child asking the parent for some good thing, and is asked with a faith and confidence in the belief that the father will do no good thing. It may be that at the close of her prayer she bursts into melodious expression of hope or of trust or thanksgiving, singing a stanza or so before rising from her knees. This ended there is another familiar song and then Miss Cartwright tells her congregation what she intends to talk about. "Ye must be born again." These words spoken by Nicodemus were her text Sunday night, and the black-coated clergy who sat about the pulpit might well have envied the clear, simple, effective manner in which she handled the somewhat worn but always vital text.

This remarkable woman loses very little time in preliminaries and meaningless sayings. Her sermon, delivered with great earnestness and concentration of thought, has fired her a little, that is evident, but pushing a wealth of brown hair back from her brow with one shapely hand, she at once makes ready for her battle for souls. Penitents are invited by the love of Christ—not terrified by the terrors of the law—to come to the altar, and they come; not singly or by twos, but by scores. Every available kneeling place is occupied by humble penitents, and with them and for them this consecrated woman prays. And if professed conversions are the measure of her success Miss Cartwright has surpassed anything known in Louisville during the recollection of the writer. However the world, and Christians too, may differ as to the best manner of inducing people to turn from evil ways, of one thing there can be no doubt: If these meetings are the means of bringing one sinner into the ways of right—of making him cease to do evil and causing him to do right—the labor has not been in vain.

The social side of the "woman-preacher" is very pleasant. She believes with the poet that "Religion never was designed To make our pleasures less," hence she wears no long-drawn face, leaves no hypocritical smiles, utters no Peck-sullivan groans. She is bright and chatty, and as we talked with her in the parlor of the Brunswick the other morning we wondered why she is not making happy the home and heart of some good man.

Miss Cartwright is a native of Ohio and comes of preaching stock. Her father is a minister, one sister older than she has been in the work, and a brother is now preparing for it. She has been preaching eight years. "How old is she?" Well, now, we were rude enough to ask her almost everything else, but this vital query we forgot. What do you say it is? Make the left hand figure mighty small, though, or you'll miss it.

We want to say in conclusion that the astonishing thing which is the stock-in-trade of so many "evangelists"—and save the mark!—is entirely wanting from Miss Cartwright's sermon. She preaches the gospel of Christ as he understood it, earnestly and effectively.

ly, appealing to reason and judgment and not to morbid and unhealthy sentiment and desire.

NOTE.

No before the bell rings if you want to get a seat.

The South Methodist brother is there, working beside his Baptist colleague.

Miss Cartwright is a good singer, but the double work is too much, and Mrs. Hughes ably assists her in singing.

An Evil and its Remedy.

We are reminded by the fact that on to-morrow occurs the annual election of school trustees in the various districts in the county, that while the election results in the selection of one or more individuals to look after the direction and control of the schools it also in fact almost invariably chooses the teacher for the district. How this can be is well known to the most casual observer. For months many teachers have had their eyes on certain districts, those which draw the largest amount from the school fund of course, and for as many months they have been laying wires for the election of men who are presumably their friends or who may be persuaded to appoint them teachers. To this end they go over this district, importuning voters to cast their votes, not for intelligent, discreet and competent men to serve in the responsible position of school trustees, but for men who are pledged or may be induced to employ them as teachers. We do not charge that these teachers offer pecuniary inducement, or that any trustee or candidate is law enough to accept a bribe, but the records of the courts show that men have been indicted for accepting a reward for their aid in this direction. So thoroughly has this reprehensible custom fastened itself upon our county school affairs that the first question heard when the election of a school trustee is announced is, Whom is he for for teacher?

The evils growing out of such a custom are many, and they are so palpable that it seems a waste of time to mention them. One of the greatest is that very often incompetent teachers are thrust upon a district unable to help or defend itself. We hold that a paper certifying that a man or woman is qualified to teach a public school does not make him or her a teacher any more than the holding a diploma or a license makes a man a lawyer or a doctor. Yet, if the teacher has the certificate, and the trustees who were elected largely through his efforts see fit to sign his contract, nothing can keep him out of the school.

And there is yet another phase of the subject, and not an uncommon one, either. There are teachers, good ones, thoroughly qualified men and women who, while as educators they succeed admirably in certain districts are utter failures in others. Of the truth of this there are people in every district in Lawrence County who will bear testimony, and under the existing state of things, electing trustees pledged to certain favorites, the very man or woman best fitted for a district may be and often is selected for its teacher.

What is the remedy? The people have it if they see fit to use it. Vote for no man for trustee whom they know or believe to be the champion of a certain teacher. Failing in this the right to elect a trustee should be taken from them and the county superintendent should have the appointment of the entire board. He already has the right to fill vacancies, and there is no good reason why he should not have entire control of the school affairs of the County and be held to a strict account for their proper administration.

Dr. Wells, through his attorney, Butler Hawkins, has sold the right to Hamilton County, Ky., for his patent adjustable toilet rack for $750.—Newport Journal.

Some double-breasted prevaricator from Ashland has been taking in such papers as the Courier Journal with a story about a wild girl roaming through the country about Webbville, this county. The same gifted descendant of Annas has caused a woman to come to life an hour or so after she had apparently died, and located the scene near the village he is now gracing with his presence. His next exploit with his facile pen will probably be a blood and thunder story concerning the Hatfields and McCoys.

UNITARY.

Mary J. Gardner, daughter of William Gardner, of White House, was born May 16th, 1876, and died May 16th, 1893. She was converted January 18th, 1892, and joined the M. E. Church South. She had lived a devoted Christian until the death of her father for her and she declared ready. Her death was unexpected to all her friends, as she was never confined to her bed. She was always in her place at Sunday School and at church was always ready to take up her cross when called on. She will be greatly missed in her Sunday School class and in the prayer and class meetings. She is missed by her pastor; her bright face is missed by all who knew her; she will be missed by her parents, but their loss is her gain. May God bless the bereaved ones and may they meet her in heaven. R. F. Rice.

BUCHANAN, MAY 31.

A great many people and different orders congregated yesterday at Kavanagh graveyard to decorate the graves of union soldiers, friends and relatives.
